It's nighttime. We're on a country lane. Mark and Steve swap thoughts on life, love, death and sex while training for the New York marathon. This is a beautifully simple exploration of what it means to be alive and a show that gives another meaning to the phrase:

"This is a show that will run and run".

Marathon is an unprecedented piece of theatre. It is an intelligent, intense and well-written one-act drama that is a darkly comic metaphor for the fatiguing path of life itself.

This is as real as theatre can get. They are running. The actors are not pretending. They can't fake it. They run for the entire hour of the show and the audience will be with them, sharing in their highs and lows, their triumphs and their struggles.
